

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A source terminal adds to a message a header including a flag indicating whether the message is private communication and information for identifying a recipient of the message and sends the message to a server. The recipient terminal displays the message received from the server, to which the flag is added, along with information indicating that the message is a private communication.